Rama and Tara: R, T • •

Both: Greetings!

Rama: talked to Poppy Lady

- The Taliban are taking more and more regions in Afghanistan and try to play both sides against the middle between the US Gov't and the Afghanistan
- The US is dragging its feet about leaving because of the $ from the poppy fields
- More and more beings coming out of the woodwork in the mountains in Northern Afghanistan – they have been around since the time of Buddha; they are part of the natural infrastructure – all through the mtns are caves that go to
 - if you talk to the rocks and so on, the stone people come out and talk to you – in Thor: the Dark Hammer – he had to take out a stone person who was not on the right page – they stand at about 50' and are part of the elementals that
 - a Book called The Kingdom of the Gods – with pics from fairies up to angels – they are all part of the ones who keep the planet in balance – Godfrey Hodson from Britain. R saw it in the 60s – like Autobiography of a Fairy
- Poppy Lady is saying these beings are right here now natural beings who take care of flora and fauna are important! And know what to do
- What is happening: a new of being with the changing of the timelines – and they will go the way of the dinosaurs as they cannot change the timelines back and get their old power back!

T: on RT they do blurbs about what will be presented during the day . .

She was hit by this one:

- announced there is a Delta Virus 1 and now a Delta Virus 2 – and the second one is 200% more powerful
- The lying part: it's a crime to make people wear masks, esp kids – and the most important thing is a healthy immune system.
 - The jab ruins the gut bacteria and then the entire immune system
 - And how many of the people programmed enough to get the jab will be interested in finding out what they did to themselves? ? ?
- Richard Muller – U of Ca Berkley – prof of physics – for the 1st 9 mo, no improvement in the virus – it jumped out fully made –
- that is a real sign of gain of function work. Because in Gain of Function work you take a virus you want to make more lethal and you want to expose it to humanize mice – genetically modified with human DNA at the hand of these evil ones
 - it makes many cycles and in a few months can get something that appears to evolve over years and the fact that this came out already adapted for human to human transmission is also unprecedented.

- This man put the info on air and RT reaches hundreds of thousands of people via radio and computer, as well as TV -
- he has said what they have done – and made more lethal things and are jumping up and down as they can kill more people, faster!
- When you are at a check out counter and talking to the teller, there is instantaneous exchange – now it's faster as there is air exchange
- the homeopath said when the flu season comes in and people have a compromised immune system or more would be much worse
- and the Delta could put lots of young people in hospital and die – how many families are there who would talk to their kids? And then there are hormones .
- the sobriety is that this is monstrous – so monstrous that people involved in this thing: the idea of the Dark Ones is to have endless war – it's biblical – and people want to fight Russia – and China is the outlier
- Matt Hancock has been sacked as Secretary of the Health ministry – not exactly a nice guy: connected with Boris – R: it's all coming down

Weather Events:

- 110* in Portland – and tomorrow 140*!!! the hottest its been in the region in entire history
- WA State and Oregon– can expect an ave of 113*
- Idaho - 114*
and for longer than a day – don't know
- and people can die in heat like this outside
- New Phrase: "Weather whiners"

T: charging of the Drumpf and the organization of the Drumpf – every one involved – and they are fighting back furiously; every single org or person who gave him $ will cut him off

- Drumpf money launders millions and millions – this is the first time he's experienced these charges in a criminal court – civil charges can be manipulated
- Drumpf cannot deal with not being the supreme authority – as long as he keeps the lie going, keeps his followers following -

- This has been repeated on all kinds of stations – put it all in The Circle of Support

NB: This is only PART of what Kryon said! ! !

7 COSMIC LAWS OF KRYON

[This is the last time these laws will be given; it is also the first and last time they have been recorded - about what happens to us when we accept the presence of Spirit.]

1. You can never return to a less aware state – we can't unknow anything! Even though we have free choice as human beings, we cannot unknow anything – go ahead! I dare you!

Cosmic Law #1 – We cannot unknow anything; the spiritual knowledge we gain brings with it responsibility

- The energies of knowledge that flow into our DNA spiritually and fill up the jar of knowledge becomes a responsibility – be careful before you decide to know it! Those who deny spiritual knowledge are in denial and are then stuck . . . Now is the time to know the unknowable – and he speaks of the bridge between the dimensions

2. The duality in us has been structured so strongly, we must look up to the Divine to find it. We have an intuition in us when we are born that there is a divine and we go look for it . . . and for a while, that satisfies us

Cosmic Law #2: At the center of our DNA there is Divinity, which only shows itself when we ask. If we don't ask, we won't know –

- there is always the intuition to propel us forward to find it – that is the fine balance – have to look for it
- These things [he speaks of] are not for everyone – will tell us about the Akash and find out more about intuition / duality
- Duality hides divinity and always will, and you have to go find it .
This explains why the human race does not rush out and find it.

3. This will sound ordinary:

- the first phrase he said to Lee was "Fear not"; the 2nd "You are dearly loved." This is the catalyst of love something that stays the same, and changes all it touches

Cosmic Law #3: The catalyst of Love: Your family loves you beyond measure. And there is no such thing as an angel or a god that will do something that will cause pain . . . That is not the truth!

- there will be challenges that will enhance your life, but we stand beside you because we love you, and you never go through difficult things alone
- anyone who touches this information in any form, feels it; this is a REAL thing happening and is not made up by his partner

4. Everything we are learning spiritually in this life time; every thing we've experienced at any time – we never have to re-learn again. The energy only becomes more sophisticated, has been raised

Cosmic Law #4: Learning is forever; we don't have to start over[when we return to earth]

- And many say if I have to do this again, I am never coming back!
- This is a spiritual DNA attribute that is packed with free choice; even though you may be a shaman, you don't have to open the jar of knowledge. It's about what you wish to do. When you open the jar, all the wisdom pours out . . .
- the spiritual jar of the young children being born now is filled with old soul energy
 - that's why the Indigos know what they know
 - You can choose not to use that knowledge and, if you so choose, you're in denial

5. when we start the journey of ascension which has many names – through pure intent, activation of the DNA; the neural implant which is the implant of permission to change; etc

- when you push on that door, and you start the knowledge of ascension, you give permission to Spirit to change things around us! Human duality is very strong and will always be there to poke us, give us fear, remind us we are fools - but they are liars
- So we say: "Thank you duality for what you do to me, for you make me aware of what I don't want anymore" - and you cross the bridge – it's like having a difficult child in the back seat who is carrying on – but it's no longer up front getting in the way!

Cosmic Law #5: all the changes we have as we walk the cosmic path, we gave permission for when we started on the path

- Do we have the courage to celebrate the challenges and the change? When we have the ability to thank the challenges, it changes our DNA structure and our body reacts differently because the boss [us!] blesses the process, then sadness, fear, worry, drama take a back seat, won't push against us: maybe for a day, that's it.
- Don't ever think you're sliding backwards. In duality, you may be captured for a day, but next day, you're OK. You can say: get away from me fear; sorrow, sadness.
 - All of us are sensitives – how would you like an armor against that ? Then someone says here's what's wrong with you – you're ready to say "I'm listening – I might learn something" - not "I don't want to hear that!" It's human to wallow in what we believe is our sorrow when we should be celebrating with the angels in the other room [for what we can/have learned from the experience]

6. There are trillions and trillions of microscopic cells in the body, all with DNA. When something happens in our body - like fear- it's a whole body experience: even your elbow knows! The body is connected in ways we don't understand: there are inter dimensional connections of DNA that go beyond the synapse.

- The quantum holy-gram [hologram] is where we are at a spiritual sense; we tend to think of ourselves as a grain of sand on a spiritual beach that is endless – an angel in a sea of angels
 - what we don't see is there is no grain of sand on a spiritual beach: it is a piece of god and everyone knows about it!

- As we grow, the Universe knows who we are. More than knows who we are: we can sit in a closet and pretend to be alone: the Universe is there. When we move beyond doubt, sorrow, fear and such, the Universe has a party! It's a whole body experience for the Universe – they all know it, and what it means to us . . .

• Cosmic Law #6 • WE ARE NOT ALONE! We cannot be alone: impossible it is!

- When we strike our light and send our light to a place or person, the Universe knows – and that is why Light is so powerful. The Light has to start somewhere and with a human of pure intent: when we send that light with pure intent, all in the Universe know. They love us for what we've done and what we're going -

7. Only the old souls need to wake up. In a progression that is geometrical on the planet – we can't just have old souls returning; have to have new ones coming in from elsewhere – we will never have an earth of Lightworkers – it takes old souls to provide the

- only the Indigos who come in are not old souls -

Cosmic Law #7: only ½ of 1% has to awaken to create peace on the planet Earth, well with in the parameters of the old souls who are here.

- And when they strike their light, it will be the Light of the Akash , pulling up from the depth of their experience
- We are in the top 1% of the people on the planet who go to bed not hungry – we have free time: we have a minute or two to share with the rest of the world
- Before you go to bed, strike a light and ask Spirit to take it where it needs to go
- And what about striking the Light for yourself and going into our own cellular structure and clearing up what needs to be cleared
- what about staying on the planet for a longer time? There are 4 in the room who are here now who would not be here in the old energy – would be dead: by our own choice, we stayed: 2 of you know now, and 2 don't
- you can choose to stay and send Light, stay healthy, rid of habits that hurt the health all about free choice
- Something more to think about: some of us have taken on a little bit more than what we came in and that means we leave with more than we came with – and he cannot say goodbye, as we take him home with us . . .
- Blessed is the human being who is not afraid of god, of healing, of crossing the bridge

To help find ways back to the core of creation, the universe created many different paths for living beings to follow that lead to the same source of truths. These teachings are realized in the 3rd dimension as spiritual practices and religions. Matias De Stefano reveals the core of these sacred teachings as they come to us through the archangels transmitting their vibrational wisdom to us. He explains that no matter what names our cultures use to call upon the gods and angels, they are all aspects of the universe which we realize within the Self.

In Atlantean times, the faces of different animals were used to represent the spirit of different groups of workers in the region. These ideals became reflected in the animal-headed gods of Egypt, which inspired various animal revering beliefs. As we delve a bit deeper into the spiritual practices of Atlantis, we learn to see the many paths of universal truth like the Atlanteans did, as a great spider web with all paths leading back to the core.

This Is Being in Love ∞The 9D Arcturian Council

This Is Being in Love ∞The 9D Arcturian Council, Channeled by Daniel Scranton

<https://danielscranton.com/304183-2/>

"Greetings. We are the Arcturian Council. We are pleased to connect with all of you.

We have discovered that there is a fine line that humans walk between the idea of being in love with someone and with being obsessed or infatuated with that person. You have many examples of when that initial feeling of love goes to the extreme of obsession in your history. There have been individuals who have committed crimes in order to impress someone that they were infatuated and obsessed with. People have committed suicide over having been rejected by someone they had that strong feeling for, and there many other examples of people going to extremes because of something as beautiful a feeling as love.

So it is important to understand what is really happening when you feel that sensation within yourself so that you can activate it and access it when you want to, in spite of whether your affections are reciprocated. When you are in love, you are in that vibration. You find the state of being within you that aligns you with the truest aspect of who you really are. When a person feels that the state is dependent on being able to have access to the individual they love whenever they want that access, and then they are not granted that access by the other person, it does feel like that separation from Source feeling that is so problematic on your world.

People spend so much time and effort and take so many actions to try to get to that place of reconnection to Source, which is obviously something that can never really be lost. When people talk about life as an illusion, that is the primary illusion. The primary illusion is that you are separate from Source. And then, follow that illusion with the one that says, 'I need that person to love me back, and I need to have access to that person in the flesh, or I will feel that separation from who I really am as unconditional love.'

Most love is conditional, and unconditional love being who you really are is the love you are really seeking. That means you can love someone else, have that love not be reciprocated, and be fine with it. That's what you seek because you seek to be love, not just to be in love and have that love reciprocated. We recognize that being in love and having that love reciprocated does make it easier to be who you really are as a Source Energy Being comprised of unconditional love, but you cannot control another person. All you can do is make it your mission to be the love that you want to have reflected back to you, and when that is your mission, you are definitely on the right track.

When you love a flower or a sunset, that is when you know you are accessing the love that you truly are very easily. The more conditions you place on being in that state of being, the harder it is going to be for you to be in your physical body and be happy and healthy. So you have to find a way to experience love, to experience your true essence, and we recommend that you do that before you get into the romantic relationship, which may or may not be forever. Accessing that love within you can be as simple as deciding to do so, being heart-centered, and feeling for the love that you truly are. And that is our recommendation to all of you.

We are the Arcturian Council, and we have enjoyed connecting with you."

*My unconscious is the potter,
Shaping and molding me,
Adding to and taking away,
Until I'm all I can be.*

Hola Potters!

Are we shapers getting shaped by Great Potter? We sure are! Especially with the full Moon in Capricorn, the sign of the elder, the ultimate authority, the dispenser of karma/dharma. Very symbolic day today (the Moon is exactly full as I am writing this newsletter)! The full Moon is a peak in her monthly cycle when she goes from waxing to waning. She's reflecting as much light as she's going to right now. The first half of the cycle is like a big inhale, where, for the last two weeks, we've been preparing inwardly. Now and for the next two weeks, it's time to exhale and blow some bubbles, make some changes, and strut your stuff!

There's no better time than a full Moon in Capricorn (which likes degrees and certificates) to announce that I will begin offering a full-on New Paradigm Astrologer Certification Program! If you have been studying astrology for some time and would like to provide others with your services and build a practice, I can help you do that. If you would just like to go deeper into your chart and those of the ones you love, I can help you with that too. The courses will be primarily online so that you can proceed at your time and pace. After completing the online courses, I will work with you personally to refine your skills and graduate.

Two online courses will be part of the certification program. The first is "Discover Your Soul's Purpose," and the second is "What Will Happen When." I am offering the second course next month, recording it, and will make it available in the store. However, joining with the "class," connecting on our group page, listening live, and asking me questions as we go along is far superior to just listening to recordings in the future. If you would like to join this course July 9-11, check it out HERE! I hope to see you on Zoom!

In the meantime, the main thing I discussed in the Pele Report can be boiled down to "take the middle way." The opposition aspect (not just the full Moon but all oppositions) has to do with finding "right" relationship. That means not giving yourself up and losing your truth, and not remaining stuck and controlling the other from your "stuckness." The same goes with boundaries, no boundaries, and you can hurt and get hurt. On the other hand, boundaries too rigid and tight can make you "root bound" and not grow. In both cases (and more), walking that tightrope is what the Potter is asking of us now. You can do it! Blessings!

Pluto, the unconscious Soul, Neptune the collective unconscious, and Uranus the personal unconscious constitute a major reason why I am a tropical astrologer versus vedic. These three factors in the horoscope take the fate versus free will conversation to a whole new level! Then, once we add that Spirit, our personal Spirit, and Great Spirit exist within the personal and collective unconscious, we begin to see the power of astrology and all forms of connecting the ego to the unconscious (yoga, meditation, plant medicine, etc.).

This expansion of the conscious ego into the unconscious realm will affect every aspect of our lives. We will see the synchronicity, the projections, the intentions, and the evolutionary impulses more clearly and be able to choose and act more in alignment. Our relationships will lighten up as they no longer need to "carry" our projections as each partner owns their "stuff." Pain and suffering will lessen as it will take fewer "reminders" that we are off track with our unconscious soul intentions, and the world will be a better place as we open our hearts with love and compassion. Yes!

He explains that the role of stem cells in our body is to maintain our health, and so treatment with stem cells can help with musculoskeletal pain and energy. While stem cells were initially discovered in fetal tissue, this therapy is not associated with embryonic cells. The therapy uses mesenchymal stem cells from your own bone marrow and fat to prompt regeneration. Dr. Adelson shares his own journey of recovering from injury and pain with the help of regenerative therapy, and bringing these treatments to his patients.

2021-06-26 Key witness in Assange case admits to lies in indictment

A major witness in the United States' Department of Justice case against Julian Assange has admitted to fabricating key accusations in the indictment against the Wikileaks founder. The witness, who has a documented history with sociopathy and has received several convictions for sexual abuse of minors and wide-ranging financial fraud, made the admission in a newly published interview in Stundin where he also confessed to having continued his crime spree whilst working with the Department of Justice and FBI and receiving a promise of immunity from prosecution.

The man in question, Sigurdur Ingi Thordarson, was recruited by US authorities to build a case against Assange after misleading them to believe he was previously a close associate of his. In fact he had volunteered on a limited basis to raise money for Wikileaks in 2010 but was found to have used that opportunity to embezzle more than $50,000 from the organization. Julian Assange was visiting Thordarson's home country of Iceland around this time due to his work with Icelandic media and members of parliament in preparing the Icelandic Modern Media Initiative, a press freedom project that produced a parliamentary resolution supporting whistleblowers and investigative journalism.

The United States is currently seeking Assange's extradition from the United Kingdom in order to try him for espionage relating to the release of leaked classified documents. If convicted, he could face up to 175 years in prison. The indictment has sparked fears for press freedoms in the United States and beyond and prompted strong statements in support of Assange from Amnesty International, Reporters without borders, the editorial staff of the Washington Post and many others.

US officials presented an updated version of an indictment against him to a Magistrate court in London last summer. The veracity of the information contained therein is now directly contradicted by the main witness, whose testimony it is based on.

No instruction from Assange

The court documents refer to Mr Thordarson simply as “Teenager” (a reference to his youthful appearance rather than true age, he is 28 years old) and Iceland as “NATO Country 1” but make no real effort to hide the identity of either. They purport to show that Assange instructed Thordarson to commit computer intrusions or hacking in Iceland.

The aim of this addition to the indictment was apparently to shore up and support the conspiracy charge against Assange in relation to his interactions with Chelsea Manning. Those occurred around the same time he resided in Iceland, and the authors of the indictment felt they could strengthen their case by alleging he was involved in illegal activity there as well. This activity was said to include attempts to hack into the computers of members of parliament and record their conversations.

In fact, Thordarson now admits to Stundin that Assange never asked him to hack or access phone recordings of MPs. His new claim is that he had in fact received some files from a third party who claimed to have recorded MPs and had offered to share them with Assange without having any idea what they actually contained. He claims he never checked the contents of the files or even if they contained audio recordings as his third party source suggested. He further admits the claim, that Assange had instructed or asked him to access computers in order to find any such recordings, is false.

Nonetheless, the tactics employed by US officials appear to have been successful as can be gleaned from the ruling of Magistrate Court Judge Vanessa Baraitser on January 4th of this year. Although she ruled against extradition, she did so purely on humanitarian grounds relating to Assange’s health concerns, suicide risk and the conditions he would face in confinement in US prisons. With regards to the actual accusations made in the indictment Baraitser sided with the arguments of the American legal team, including citing the specific samples from Iceland which are now seriously called into question.

Other misleading elements can be found in the indictment, and later reflected in the Magistrate’s judgement, based on Thordarson’s now admitted lies. One is a reference to Icelandic bank documents. The Magistrate court judgement reads: “It is alleged that Mr. Assange and Teenager failed a joint attempt to decrypt a file stolen from a “NATO country 1” bank”.

Sigurður Ingi Thordarson
Mynd: Sigtryggur Ari

Thordarson admits to Stundin that this actually refers to a well publicised event in which an encrypted file was leaked from an Icelandic bank and assumed to contain information about defaulted loans provided by the Icelandic Landsbanki. The bank went under in the fall of 2008, along with almost all other financial institutions in Iceland, and plunged the country into a severe economic crisis. The file was at this time, in summer of 2010, shared by many online who attempted to decrypt it for the public interest purpose of revealing what precipitated the financial crisis. Nothing supports the claim that this file was even “stolen” per se, as it was assumed to have been distributed by whistleblowers from inside the failed bank.

More deceptive language emerges in the aforementioned judgment where it states: “...he [Assange] used the unauthorized access given to him by a source, to access a government website of NATO country-1 used to track police vehicles.”

This depiction leaves out an important element, one that Thordarson clarifies in his interview with Stundin. The login information was in fact his own and not obtained through any nefarious means. In fact, he now admits he had been given this access as a matter of routine due to his work as a first responder while volunteering for a search and rescue team. He also says Assange never asked for any such access.

Revealing chat logs

Thordarson spoke with a journalist from Stundin for several hours as he prepared a thorough investigative report into his activities that include never before published chat logs and new documents.

The chat logs were gathered by Thordarson himself and give a comprehensive picture of his communications whilst he was volunteering for Wikileaks in 2010 and 11. It entails his talks with WikiLeaks staff as well as unauthorized communications with members of international hacking groups that he got into contact with via his role as a moderator on an open IRC WikiLeaks forum, which is a form of live online chat. There is no indication WikiLeaks staff had any knowledge of Thordarson’s contacts with aforementioned hacking groups, indeed the logs show his clear deception.

The communications there show a pattern where Thordarson is constantly inflating his position within WikiLeaks, describing himself as chief of staff, head of communications, No 2 in the organization or responsible for recruits. In these communications Thordarson frequently asks the hackers to either access material from Icelandic entities or attack Icelandic websites with so-called DDoS attacks. These are designed to disable sites and make them inaccessible but not cause permanent damage to content.

Stundin cannot find any evidence that Thordarson was ever instructed to make those requests by anyone inside WikiLeaks. Thordarson himself is not even claiming that, although he explains this as something Assange was aware of or that he had interpreted it so that this was expected of him. How this supposed non-verbal communication took place he cannot explain.

Furthermore, he never explained why WikiLeaks would be interested in attacking any interests in Iceland, especially at such a sensitive time while they were in the midst of publishing a huge trove of US diplomatic cables as part of an international media partnership. Assange is not known to have had any grievances with Icelandic authorities and was in fact working with members of parliament in updating Iceland’s freedom of press laws for the 21st century.

On the FBI radar

Thordarson's rogue acts were not limited to communications of that nature as he also admits to Stundin that he set up avenues of communication with journalists and had media pay for lavish trips abroad where he misrepresented himself as an official representative of WikiLeaks.

He also admits that he stole documents from WikiLeaks staff by copying their hard drives. Among those were documents from Renata Avila, a lawyer who worked for the organization and Mr. Assange.

Thordarson continued to step up his illicit activities in the summer of 2011 when he established communication with "Sabu", the online moniker of Hector Xavier Monsegur, a hacker and a member of the rather infamous LulzSec hacker group. In that effort all indications are that Thordarson was acting alone without any authorization, let alone urging, from anyone inside WikiLeaks.

What Thordarson did not know at the time was that the FBI had arrested Sabu in the beginning of June 2011 and threatened him into becoming an informant and a collaborator for the FBI. Thus, when Thordarson continued his previous pattern of requesting attacks on Icelandic interests, the FBI knew and saw an opportunity to implicate Julian Assange.

Later that month a DDoS attack was performed against the websites of several government institutions.

That deed was done under the watchful eyes of the FBI who must have authorized the attack or even initiated it, as Sabu was at that point their man. What followed was an episode where it seems obvious that Icelandic authorities were fooled into cooperation under false pretenses.

Ögmundur Jónasson was minister of interior at time and as such the political head of police and prosecution and says of the US activities: "They were trying to use things here [in Iceland] and use people in our country to spin a web, a cobweb that would catch Julian Assange".

"They were trying to use things here [in Iceland] and use people in our country to spin a web, a cobweb that would catch Julian Assange" Ögmundur Jónasson

Jónasson recalls that when the FBI first contacted Icelandic authorities on June 20th 2011 it was to warn Iceland of an imminent and grave threat of intrusion against government computers. A few days later FBI agents flew to Iceland and offered formally to assist in thwarting this grave danger. The offer was accepted and on July 4th a formal rogatory letter was sent to Iceland to seal the mutual assistance.. Jónasson speculates that already then the US was laying the groundwork for its ultimate purpose, not to assist Iceland but entrap Julian Assange:

"What I have been pondering ever since is if the spinning of the web had already started then with the acceptance of the letter rogatory establishing cooperation that they could use as a pretext for later visits," says Jónasson.

Icelandic policemen were sent to the US to gather further evidence of this so-called imminent danger and Jónasson says he does not recall anything of substance coming out of that visit and no further attacks were made against Icelandic interests.

But the FBI would return.

Icelandic officials deceived by the US

Towards the end of August, Thordarson was being pursued by WikiLeaks staff who wished to locate the proceeds of online sales of WikiLeaks merchandise. It emerged Thordarson had instructed the funds be sent to his private bank account by forging an email in the name of Julian Assange.

Thordarson saw a way out and on August 23d he sent an email to the US Embassy in Iceland offering information in relation to a criminal investigation. He was replied to with a call and confirmed that he was offering to be an informant in the case against Julian Assange.

The prosecutors and FBI were quick in responding and within 48 hrs a private jet landed in Reykjavik with around eight agents who quickly set up meetings with Thordarson and with people from the Icelandic State Prosecutors office and the State Police Commissioner.

Ögmundur Jónasson Former Iceland Minister of the Interior.
Mynd: Davíð Þór

Mid day, Mr. Jónasson, then Minister of Interior got wind of this new visit and requested confirmation that this related to the same case as earlier in the summer. "I asked on what rogatory letter this visit was based and if this was exactly the same case", Jónasson says in an interview with Stundin. "I then found out that this was of a totally different nature than previously discussed". He says he put two and two together and said it was obvious that the intention was to lay a trap in Iceland for Assange and other staff members of WikiLeaks.

Such actions were according to Jónasson way outside the scope of the agreement and thus he ordered that all cooperation with the agents be stopped and that they would be informed they were acting in Iceland without any authority. Only days later he learned that the agents and prosecutors had not yet left the country so the Ministry of Foreign Affairs contacted the US embassy with the demand they halt police work in Iceland and leave the country.

They did, but left with the new informant and "star witness", Sigurdur Ingi Thordarson who flew with them to Denmark.

Not a hacker but a sociopath

Thordarson has been nicknamed Siggie the hacker in Iceland. That is actually an antonym as several sources Stundin has talked to claim that Thordarson's computer ability is menial. This is supported by several chat logs and documents where he is requesting assistance from others doing rather uncomplicated computer jobs. Once he even sought FBI expert help in uploading a video from his own phone.

The meeting in Denmark was the first of a few where the FBI enthusiastically embraced the idea of co-operation with Thordarson. He says they wanted to know everything about WikiLeaks, including physical security of staff. They took material he had gathered, including data he had stolen from WikiLeaks employees and even planned to send him to England with a wire. Thordarson claimed in interviews he had refused that particular request. It was probably because he was not welcomed anymore as he knew WikiLeaks people had found out, or were about to firmly establish, that he had embezzled funds from the organization.

After months of collaboration the FBI seem to have lost interest. At about the same time charges were piling up against Thordarson with the Icelandic authorities for massive fraud, forgeries and theft on the one hand and for sexual violations against underage boys he had tricked or forced into sexual acts on the other.

After long investigations Thordarson was sentenced in 2013 and 2014 and received relatively lenient sentences as the judge took into account that he changed his plea at court and pleaded guilty to all counts.

According to a psychiatric assessment presented to the court Thordarson was diagnosed as a sociopath, incapable of remorse but still criminally culpable for his actions. He was assessed to be able to understand the basic difference between right and wrong, He just did not seem to care.

Incarceration did not seem to have an intended effect of stopping Thordarson from continuing his life of crime. It actually took off and expanded in extent and scope in 2019 when the Trump-era DoJ decided to revisit him, giving him a formal status as witness in the prosecution against Julian Assange and granting him immunity in return from any prosecution.

The New York Times Problem

In the month following Assange's arrest in the Ecuadorian Embassy in London on April 11th 2019 a new rogatory letter arrived in the Ministry of Justice in Iceland. This time the request was to take a formal statement from Thordarson in Iceland in the presence of his lawyer. The Ministry had a new political head at the time, who had limited knowledge of the prior history of the case.

Although the Department of Justice had spent extreme resources attempting to build a case against Julian Assange during the Obama presidency, they had decided against indicting Assange. The main concern was what was called "The New York Times Problem", namely that there was such a difficulty in distinguishing between WikiLeaks publications and NYT publications of the same material that going after one party would pose grave First Amendment concerns.

Sigurdur Ingi Thordarson and Julian Assange

President Donald Trump's appointed Attorney general William Barr did not share these concerns, and neither did his Trump-appointed deputy Kellen S. Dwyer. Barr, who faced severe criticism for politicizing the DoJ on behalf of the president, got the ball rolling on the Assange case once again. Their argument was that if they could prove he was a criminal rather than a journalist the charges would stick, and that was where Thordarson's testimony would be key.

In May 2019 Thordarson was offered an immunity deal, signed by Dwyer, that granted him immunity from prosecution based on any information on wrong doing they had on him. The deal, seen in writing by Stundin, also guarantees that the DoJ would not share any such information to other prosecutorial or law enforcement agencies. That would include Icelandic ones, meaning that the Americans will not share information on crimes he might have committed threatening Icelandic security interests – and the Americans apparently had plenty of those but had over the years failed to share them with their Icelandic counterparts.

In any event, Assange has never been suspected of any wrongdoing in Iceland. Stundin has seen confirmation of this from the District Prosecutor in Iceland, the Reykjavik Metropolitan Police. Assange has no entry in the LÖKE database of any police activity linked to an individual collected by the Icelandic State Police Commissioner from 2009-2021.

Assange's lawyer also inquired in the Icelandic Foreign Ministry if the points in his updated indictment where Iceland is referred to as NATO country 1 meant that his case had any relevance to Icelandic membership to NATO, the bilateral defense agreement between USA and Iceland or any national security interests. All such connections were dismissed in a reply from the defense attache at the Ministry.

Immunity and a new crimespree

According to information obtained by Stundin the immunity deal between DoJ and Thordarson was presented at the Headquarters of the Reykjavik police where the only role of the Icelandic policeman was to confirm the identity of Thordarson before leaving him alone with his lawyer in the back room where he met the US delegation.

It is as if the offer of immunity, later secured and sealed in a meeting in DC, had encouraged Thordarson to take bolder steps in crime. He started to fleece individuals and companies on a grander scale than ever; usually by either acquiring or forming legal entities he then used to borrow merchandise, rent luxury cars, even order large quantities of goods from wholesalers without any intention to pay for these goods and services.

Sigurdur Ingi Thordarson
Mynd: Pressphotos/Geirix

Thordarson also forged the name of his own lawyer on notices to the Company House registry, falsely claiming to have raised the equity of two companies to over 800 thousand US dollars. The aim was to use these entities with solid financial positions on paper in a real estate venture.

The lawyer has reported the forgery to the police where other similar cases, along with multiple other reports of theft and trickery, are now piling up.

When confronted with evidence of all these crimes by a Stundin journalist he simply admitted to everything and explained it away as normal business practice. He has not yet been charged and is still practicing this "business". Local newspaper DV reported last week that Thordarson had attempted to order merchandise on credit using a new company name, Icelandic Vermin Control. Despite using a fake name and a COVID face mask he was identified and the transaction was stopped. He was last seen speeding away in a white Tesla, according to DV.

2021-06-24 Cowessess finds signs of 751 unmarked graves at former residential school

<https://leaderpost.com/news/saskatchewan/cowessess-reports-finding-751-unmarked-graves-at-former-residential-school>

"We will find more bodies," said FSIN Chief Bobby Cameron. "And we will not stop until we find all of our children."

Author of the article: Arthur White-Crummey

Cowessess First Nation, Sask.: Using ground-penetrating radar, evidence of 751 unmarked graves have been located to date at the site of the former Marieval Residential School on what is now Cowessess First Nation land. Eighteen years ago, Lorraine Fummerton returned to the site of Marieval Indian Residential School, which she attended as a girl.

She was with her daughter, at a powwow in the community she left decades ago. Mother and daughter decided to visit the grave of Fummerton's late sister at the cemetery near the school. They wandered into a nearby field, which left Fummerton at a loss. She seemed to be searching for something that survived only in memory.

"She kept saying, 'Where are the gravestones?' " recalls her daughter, Kelly Richard. "It was just very heartbreaking for her."

Over the past three weeks, a search near the cemetery site on Cowessess First Nation has found what may have haunted Fummerton that day. Ground-penetrating radar detected evidence of hundreds of unmarked graves, part of what a Saskatchewan Indigenous leader calls the legacy of a genocide against his people.

Searchers have left 751 flags to mark the spots where tombstones should be. Cowessess Chief Cadmus Delorme said each flag records a "hit" from the radar. The work is only part of Phase 1 of efforts to locate and honour those in unmarked graves near the school. The process is subject to a 10- to 15-per-cent margin of error, but Delorme believes there are at least 600 bodies, and probably many more. For now, as research continues, the best estimate remains 751.

Delorme couldn't confirm that all the bodies are of children, since there are oral histories that there are also adults at the site. In any case, he said it will take years to identify the remains.

"We want to honour our loved ones that lay there today," he told reporters. "We want to make sure that we keep that place and preserve it, so many can come here and heal. It's going to hurt in the coming months."

The Fummerton family gathered in their current home of Calgary to watch a press conference about the discovery, which drew media from as far away as Germany and Spain. Richard was stunned. Her mother now has brain cancer, and didn't talk much about residential schooling even when she was well. But Fummerton's other daughter, Tracy Sych, recalls seeing her mother "visibly shake" as she witnessed the horrific news.

"We knew something was coming, but did not expect this many potential lost people," Sych told the Leader-Post.

Delorme explained to reporters that the graves may have been previously marked, with the headstones removed in the 1960s. Though it's unclear whether any law was breached at the time, Delorme noted that's now a crime.

"We are treating this like a crime scene," he said.

The discovery at Cowessess could be more than triple the 215 unmarked graves located at a former residential school site in Kamloops late last month. That discovery shocked the country and triggered a wider search for the undocumented remains of students at other residential schools.

Saskatchewan had roughly 20 residential schools, and the Federation of Sovereign Indigenous Nations (FSIN) has prioritized several that could have undocumented burials. The Truth and Reconciliation Commission has direct information about 4,100 children across Canada who died of disease or accident while attending a residential school, but commission chair Murray Sinclair has said there are undoubtedly far more who have not been found, potential victims of tuberculosis, malnutrition or neglect.

FSIN Chief Bobby Cameron said the discovery at Cowessess shows "the results of the genocide that Canada committed." He likened residential schools, where Indigenous culture was suppressed in children often held against the wishes of their families, to concentration camps. He called the system a "crime against humanity," perpetrated on children whose only crime was being born Indigenous.

"We will find more bodies," Cameron said. "And we will not stop until we find all of our children."

<https://youtu.be/GzKxPV9L5Y8>

The Marieval Residential School operated from 1899 to 1997 on what is now Cowessess land, about 165 kilometres east of Regina. It was run by the Roman Catholic Church. The government took over the school in 1968, and Cowessess itself assumed responsibility in the 1980s. It closed in 1997 and was demolished two years later, but the cemetery remains.

Flags mark the site of 751 unmarked graves at the site of the former Marieval Residential School on what is now Cowessess First Nation land. Photo provided by the Federation of Sovereign Indigenous Nations on June 24, 2021. jpg

Delorme called on Pope Francis to apologize for the church's role in the tragedy, something the pontiff has resisted. But in a letter to Cowessess, Archbishop Donald Bolen of the Archdiocese of Regina acknowledged the "brutal legacy of the Indian Residential School system" and the deep wounds left for those who endured abuse at Marieval. He repeated a previous apology for the "failure and sins of church leaders."

In an interview, Bolen recounted conversations with Cowessess members, who told him an oblate priest used a bulldozer to destroy tombstones in the 1960s. He called it "unthinkable."

He pledged to do whatever he can to "turn that apology into meaningful concrete acts," including by helping access information to identify the dead.

Florence Sparvier, an elder at Cowessess who spoke to reporters along with leadership on Thursday, attended the Marieval school after her mother and grandmother. She said life there was harsh, as nuns at the school were "condemning about our people."

"They told us our people, our parents and grandparents, didn't have a way to be spiritual — because we were all heathens," she said.

"They were putting us down as a people, so we learned to not like who we were."

Politicians and leaders in Saskatchewan and around the country expressed their horror at the discovery. Prime Minister Justin Trudeau called it a "shameful reminder" of racism and injustice. Premier Scott Moe called it "heartbreaking." NDP Ryan Meili expressed sadness and anger, while calling for supports for those still grappling with trauma.

The news was met with grief and resilience in the wider Cowessess community, as trauma rippled down to younger generations whose relatives lived there. Susannah Redmond, who lives on Cowessess and has relatives who attended Marieval, called it a “terrible discovery” in a text conversation with the Leader-Post.

“It brings a grief and terrible memories that the previous generations have known and lived with for years,” she wrote. “At the same time, I know our community will come through this just as strong as before.”

Metis man Isaac Racette, who said his grandmother attended Marieval, said he’s felt empty all day as he processes the scale of the tragedy. In his view, it will stay with descendants of survivors for generations to come.

“I don’t think anybody knows how to comprehend news like that,” he said. “It makes you want to be angry. It makes you want to cry.”

Richard, the daughter who accompanied her mother to that lonely field, feels like the schools robbed her of something precious.

“It’s heartbreaking,” she said. “We are the lost generation. We are the generation that grew up not knowing our culture, not being taught, not being given the proper teachings, the proper songs, the lessons. Mom didn’t speak about being Indigenous. It was forbidden.

“Today was hard... I can’t even describe how I feel.”

Cowessess First Nation, Sask.: Using ground-penetrating radar, evidence of 751 unmarked graves have been located to date at the site of the former Marieval Residential School on what is now Cowessess First Nation land. FSIN officials say they expect more tragic discoveries as those efforts continue. Cameron said Thursday that the world must understand what First Nations endured through the residential school system.

"This was a crime against humanity, an assault on First Nations people," he said. "We are proud people. The only crime we ever committed as children was being born Indigenous."

In a social media post, the FSIN provided phone numbers for those grappling with emotional distress as a result of the discoveries. Those in need of support can call the Indian Residential School Survivors Society at 1-800-721-0066, toll free, or the 24-hour Crisis Line at 1-866-925-4419.

2021-06-25 A Message to Lightworkers – June 25, 2021 by Caroline Oceana Ryan

This week's guidance from the Ascended Masters, Galactics, Earth Elements, Fae Elders, Angelic legions, and Archangels known as the Collective:

Greetings, dear ones! We are very pleased to have this moment to speak with you again today.

Today our writer has a question for us:

COR: My friends, so many are reacting—not responding, but reacting to and wrestling with the extremely high energies coming in now.

This uptick seems to have come in even more powerfully with the recent Solstice, though many feel the higher Light coming to the Earth was powerful enough already!

Humanity is undergoing great changes.

For some, that means releasing things that will not flow well with the higher vibration they are experiencing now, and acclimating to.

As we accept this Light and integrate it with their full being, it feels increasingly uncomfortable to keep situations in our lives that may have felt OK even a month ago, but which now just feel “not right.”

So we might be adopting a new set of ideas about an old issue, or a new interest, or ideas we weren't expecting

Many are in crisis from these changes, which strike at the very center of our lives.

Others have already been in crisis — challenges in health, finances, work or relationships, or due to what they see happening around them in the world.

Millions have lost their jobs over the past year, and many have also lost their home as a result.

Many have questions now about how to handle the lack of sleep, intense or disturbing dreams, emotional ups and downs, eating more or far less, wanting to release the need for words and dependency on left-brain thought.

Would you explain what is happening, and assist us in adjusting to all of this?

THE COLLECTIVE: Indeed, much is occurring that would have anyone confused and uncertain!

And so our empathy is with all of you, for even those of you who take time each day for quiet moments of meditation or other spiritual practices are finding these shifts difficult to navigate at times.

This is made all the more challenging, considering that millions of Light Bearers have felt that by this time, these shifts and changes would have abated a bit if not completely, and that a New Earth form of living would have come forward in ways that felt balanced and “normal.”

Now you find that if anything, the challenges are greater than ever before, and no less so, due to what the world has experienced over the past 18 months.

Most of you have not known consciously how deep a morass Earth life has dwelled in for millennia, and so the cleansing you see now is a bit of a shock.

And so the unusual circumstances you find yourselves in—physically, astrologically, socially, energetically—have to do not with what you have expected or consciously called in, but what you have not fully grasped as necessary, and that is the shift to the New Earth timeline.

And so we would say, You are correct if you are feeling that your old life will not suit you any longer, because it has vanished.

It has fallen well behind you on the scale of evolvment, and in the sense that you have moved from one timeline to another.

This is the unavoidable outcome of the new era you now enter. And the outcome of what you have consciously called in, which is a vibrational shift to a higher dimension.

A 3D timeline can only bring you so much evolvment, friends!

Nearly all of you have lived many lives on this Earth, circling around from one incarnation to the next, working on the same issues, the same connections with others, over and over again, in search of both growth and resolution.

Over those hundreds or even thousands of years, you found that while some progress has been made, the ongoing reincarnating form of life on this planet must end now, and with it, all the density you once required, for purposes of experience and experimentation.

Certainly, those who remain constantly in a high vibration have long viewed your struggle, and do not envy such!

Those of us who have lived Earth lives know well the extreme intensity of Earth experience on an emotional level, and the pains and weaknesses of the human body within this very low dimension.

Your experiences, while priceless in many ways, have been taxing in the extreme, and your souls have borne the brunt of that trauma, fracturing at times as you have struggled with lower vibrational experiences.

So that now you have moved onto a new timeline, in which lower density can no longer be sustained (nor are you interested in experiencing such any longer), you feel many things at once.

Similar to the deep sea diver having to come up to the surface slowly to avoid getting the bends, your bodies and subconscious minds, as well as your spirits are adjusting at a rate they can stand, without breaking down.

As with all great changes, you will experience a feeling of loss some days, as the old passes away.

Yes, a feeling of sadness and loss, that the sadness and loss are leaving!

For you have associated lower emotional density with Who you are, though we are able to assure you, that is not your true nature.

Once free of a human body, while in between incarnations, you tend to revert to your true selves, including your higher aspect, and clear communication with your soul.

You are reaching for that again now, in memory of how clear, Light, and beautiful that experience is.

And so your individual forms of emotional, mental, and physical density are coming forward in the higher Light you are integrating now, as you accept as your own that library of Inner Knowing developing in your New Human cells.

All of it is rising to the surface, asking for either healing and resolution, or for complete transformation into a new form.

A form that will reflect and hold this new higher Light in ways that are Joyful and natural to you.

Many of you are seeking higher meaning in everyday life now in new ways that can indeed feel surprising—another sign that you are no longer the third dimensional beings you once were.

It will be harder to be casual and unthinking about what you buy and when, how you eat, how you greet and speak with others, how you view the natural world, how you view Time (which, yes, is disappearing), and your nightly etheric travels.

All of this takes on higher meaning now, not via left-brain reasoning as you have been taught, but through the high heart.

We are aware that sleep presents a particularly vexing issue, as your nightly etheric travels broaden and expand to include more multi-locating, and deeper and more resonant connections to loved ones and colleagues within your Earth mission.

So that while you desire complete physical rest, whole parts of your spirit and psyche are ringing with excitement over the changes that Earth life is undergoing now.

You desire very much to be “awake” enough to be consciously aware of and to remember these travels and the work you are doing in the night time, and yet, were you to be awake, they could not offer the kind of sleep-travel that you have engaged in for your entire lives.

And so for now, much of that is kept “under wraps” except for strange dreams that speak to you in images with symbols that try to convey the depth of your multidimensional experience, without alarming you too badly.

These are images that are not too “intergalactic” for those not quite prepared for certain awarenesses, though the vibrational transmission of the message still reaches you.

And so—how to integrate all of this and be supportive of this growing-into-fifth-dimensional-life process, and supportive of your own well-being at the same time?

We would say, particularly for those who have very full work and/or family schedules, and therefore find that more physical rest and/or meditation is not very likely to occur—engage in healing and nurturing habits whenever you can.

Keep sound healing recordings on in the background as you work or do household chores—so long as you are not driving while listening. These can be very calming and supportive.

Listen to guided meditations and sound healing or energy clearings as you are falling asleep at night.

Turn the sound down to where you can comfortably fall asleep, while the energies of the recording are still reaching you.

Inform your Spirit team of Angelic guardians, guides, and higher self that you require their assistance in helping you sleep more fully at night, and in orienting your mental/emotional state to one of deep calm.

Tell them that you are open to their suggestions as how best to do that.

Take a moment and do this right now!

Then be aware as you either hear them inwardly, or receive Light-filled thoughts or ideas from within that bring a sense of relief; a feeling that this is a solution to what you have been asking about.

You may also receive ideas from outer sources that alert you to one form of assistance or another.

It is important to act on these ideas, and not merely to mentally note them.

Do not sweep them aside thinking, “I have no time for that,” for it may not take that much time to integrate 10 minutes of chanting a helpful and empowering mantra each morning, or 20 minutes of meditation or yoga practice, or 30 minutes in Nature most days.

Yet these moments can transform your vibration and make the integration of these shifts and changes far more palatable and easygoing.

You already find time for that which feels completely necessary each day—a shower or bath, getting dressed, eating meals, brushing teeth—and so, consider these actions that you receive direction on to be just as vital, only more so.

If it still feels impossible, take 5 minutes each day to clear your mind of all thoughts, and simply concentrate on your breathing.

You may wish to place yourself in the Transmuting Violet Flame of Saint Germain as you do so, as this can be a cleansing and quieting image to work with.

Allow it to flow through you, releasing tension, upset, stresses, and worries.

In any highly individual journey, there is no one cure-all for all persons, to ease the roughness of the transition.

Each of you will find your own way to calm yourself and to more peacefully integrate what you are experiencing now, if you will make that a priority in your day, and not only those outer items which require your attention.

This is an outer item (and an inner one) requiring your attention, and it calls to you now, from the depths of your soul!

These are not “normal” times, dear ones.

You hear much about life “going back to normal,” and yet we assure you, that will not occur, nor have you wanted such.

You have desired to leave behind the lies and illusions, the suppression of your Divine Light.

And to release the drastic circumstances, but not to avoid drastic change.

For you have called that to you, and are here to experience such.

So open now, without resistance, to what occurs, and keep a journal of your discoveries—dreams, realizations, changes within and without, reactions to “the world situation,” breakthroughs in remembering how to manifest.

And in coming months, look back at times to see how miraculously far you have come.

We are with you in this process, dear ones.

Daily your loved ones watch over you from the ships, from Inner Earth, and from the higher dimensions, as does Earth Herself.

All send you not only the sustenance of their Love, but a new form of patience that you did not know you could carry.

And so it is—that by which you have typified your humanity has faded from view, and your sovereignty enters the room, and requires that you step fully into that form, and inhabit your true being.

You would not have had it any other way.

Namaste, dear ones!

We send much Love, and as always assure you once again: You are never alone.
