2021-10-01 Friday The Poppy Lady; Natasha

Rama: I received a text message from the Poppy Lady at 11:30 this morning.

"Lord Rama, we are still picking up refugees and taking them to the Wesak Valley; they will be integrated into the Nameless Ones community. Please continue to hold Afghanistan in the Violet Flame of St Germain.

"The empire wants the lithium here in the soil of my country, along with many, many other minerals in her ground. Because they are worth trillions of dollars on the global market.

"Place all this in the Circle of Support and Blaze the Violet Fire. Sat Nam. Namaste."

NOTE: I also received a text message from Lady Natasha after 2 pm this afternoon. She said to me: "Lord Rama, the case Greg Palast is exposing is regarding Mr Donziger who is a political prisoner, not unlike Julian Assange."

Human rights lawyer sentenced to prison despite UN order to release him immediately

Human rights lawyer Steven Donziger has been sentenced to prison for 6 months — punishment for winning a $9 billion judgment against Chevron for destroying the Amazon with oil sludge — and literally killing Cofan indigenous people, Donziger's clients.

<https://youtu.be/-kJTznpkXsI>

Greg Palast, who investigated the oil poisoning in Ecuador for BBC, reports from the courthouse as Donziger is sentenced — despite an order to release Donziger by the United Nations Human Rights Commission judicial panel.

Amazon Watch, 60 Nobel Prize winners, the bar associations of a dozen nations, the UN, have all called for an end to this political prosecution. Extraordinarily, the US Justice Dept. would not prosecute Donziger, so the judge, a known right-wing zealot, hired a lawyer whose firm represented Chevron, to conduct the prosecution — and denied Donziger a jury trial.

Mr X

Rama: I received a call from Mr X today. It was 12:30 pm. He said to me: "Greetings, Lord Rama. I have been on a journey. I have travelled to Alpha Centari (4.1 Light years from Earth) in the last few months, to meet with other galactic ambassadors about the planetary crisis on earth/Mother Gaia."

Mr X continued: "We've got climate disruption, consciousness raising, and conflict going on. Right at the moment, the Pandora Papers open up Jeffrey Epsteins's Black Book on the filthy rich. King Abdullah of Jordan is in the spotlight because he has bought 3 properties across the planet and, in doing so, has not paid one dime of tax. (Malibu, Washington, DC, and London)

"Within these papers, it shows the vast wealth of the 1/16th of 1% - people like Warren Buffet, Bill Gates, Bill and Hillary Clinton, John Boehner (former Speaker of the House under Bush Jr), Bill Richardson, Bush Jr., Roger Stone, Steve Bannon, Paul Manafort, and the rest of the 500,000 of these lifeforms who have violated cosmic law. Therefore, Galactic intervention is called for.

"Place all of this in the Circle of Support: She Who Was Here Before The Gods Were Here, is here, NOW! I will be seeing you soon, Lord Rama! Enshallah. Namaste."

Sweet Angelique the Cat

Rama: I received a text message from Sweet Angelique the Cat late this morning; it was 11:30 am. She said to me: "Lord Rama, I am calling you from Marseilles, France. France is calling out the Vatican for the 100s and 100s of thousands of children buried in mass graves all over the world. [Tara: It was reported on RT to be more than 330,000 children murdered by the Vatican since 1950 - the most recent count.]

"Yet this practice of what is called The Obscene Rite: the ritual of killing babies, eating their flesh, and drinking their blood has been going on in many, many circles, yes - in the political arena as well as in religious circles and everything else in between.

"It all goes WAY BACK to the time of Isis and Osiris as Kahotepe, a barbarian who lived in upper Siberia, was picked up by Isis and Osiris in their starship called The Sothis and taken with them to Egypt, where he was trained by them as a priest-scientist in the temples of Egypt. He served Isis and Osiris for 600 years, until Isis and Osiris completed their mission there and took their leave back to Sirius B, their home.

"Kahotepe felt totally abandoned; he became very, very angry. He took to going out under the cover of night and, on one of those nights, he came across a shepherd boy guarding his flock of sheep. He cut open the boy's head, scooped out the pituitary and pineal glands and ate them.

"This dark ritual goes on behind closed doors in the Vatican, as well as in secret meetings of the Deep State - regularly! It has even taken place in the White House, numbers of times. This is why Mother comes: to end all killing as a way of life here on Planet Earth. . . and no nukes!

"Blaze the Violet Fire! Sat Nam! Namaste! Remember - we are the ones we have been waiting for!"

Thursday

His Holiness, the Dalai Lama; Professor Nicodemus

Rama: I received a text message from His Holiness, the Dalai Lama today at noon.

This text message was in the form of a 4 minute video. In the video, His Holiness was honouring Archbishop Desmond Tutu on his 90th birthday, today. Essentially, His Holiness' message was to continue to follow the path of peace, love and compassion, as the Buddha has taught us.

Rama: All we are saying is 'give peace a chance'.

Next, I went to visit Professor Nicodemus today (Note: he is a 4' tall rat who has the ability to shape-shift into human form. As I visit him in the privacy of his own home, a huge storage unit the size of two boxcars long, he is in his rat form, and he had on a tee shirt and levis, just like me!) Professor Nicadomus is also a quantum physicist who worked at Los Alamos Lab in the past. He said:

"There are huge events going on in our solar system. This has to do with the area of space we are travelling through. There are highly charged particles of cosmic neutrinos coming into earth's atmosphere. These neutrinos come from stars called pulsars and quazars, and they come from deep space. As they are beginning to arrive, we, as we tune in, can experience being lifted up, and these incoming energies are here to change matter and time.

"Time is speeding up, as we can all see. This is about the Great Convergence that is happening now. Our sun, Sol, as well, is moving into a higher octave, and all the planets in our solar system are also experiencing this upliftment.

"Stay in the Violet Flame; this is the most intense time as we go into the ending of Mercury Retrograde. May the Force be with you! Sat Nam! Namaste!"

Rights Attorney Donziger Pays Price for Defending Indigenous in Ecuador Poisoned by Oil
by Greg Palast

Look at his face. Emergildo Criollo, Chief of the Cofan people of the Amazon in Ecuador. Determined, dignified, in war paint, bare-chested.

Cofan Chief Emergildo Criollo, Ecuador

It was back in 2007, when I found him in his thatched stilt home in the rain forest. Criollo told me his 5-year-old son had jumped into a swimming hole, covered with an enticing shine. The shine was oil sludge, illegally dumped. His son came up vomiting blood, then dropped dead in the Chief's arms.

I followed him to the courthouse in the dusty roustabout town of Lago Agrio (Bitter Lake) where, with a sheaf of papers, Criollo sought justice for his son.

Behind Criollo, the court clerks, in their white shirts and ties, were giggling and grinning at each other, nodding toward this "indio" painted up and half naked, thinking he can file a suit against a giant. A giant named Chevron.

In 2011, they stopped laughing. That's when an Ecuadorian court ordered Chevron to pay Criollo and other indigenous co-plaintiffs $9.5 billion. The courts found that Chevron's Texaco operation had illegally dumped 16 billion gallons of deadly oil waste.

What the gigglers didn't know is that the Chief had a secret weapon: Steven Donziger, a US attorney, classmate of Barack Obama at Harvard law, who gave up everything—literally everything—to take on Criollo's case.

(courtesy AmazonWatch)

It's been a decade, and Chevron still hasn't paid a dime. But Donziger has paid big time: For the last two years, he's been under house arrest, longer than any American in history never convicted of a crime.

But weeks ago, he was convicted of contempt by a judge who denied him a jury. (The Constitution? Faggedaboutit.) And on October 1, this contemptible judge will sentence Donziger, and could put him behind bars.

Who was the prosecutor? Not the US government, but Chevron's law firm. The first-ever criminal prosecution by a US corporation.

Say what?

I can't make this up.

Chevron set out to destroy Donziger, to make an example of a human rights lawyer that dares take on the petroleum pirates.

They filed suits against Donziger and the Cofan and found a former tobacco industry lawyer judge Lewis Kaplan to find Donziger in contempt for refusing to turn over his cell phone and computer to Chevron—an unprecedented attack on attorney-client privilege. To give Chevron the names of indigenous activists in South America can be a death sentence.

When Donziger said he'd appeal, the judge charged him with criminal contempt—that's simply unprecedented. But a far more dangerous precedent was set. When federal prosecutors in New York laughed off and rejected Kaplan's demand that they charge Donziger, the judge appointed Chevron's lawyers, Gibson Dunn & Crutcher, to act as the prosecutors!

So far, 60 Nobel Laureates, several US Senators and Congresspeople, and a Who's Who of human rights groups have publicly registered their horror at this new corporate prosecution. (Note: Gibson Dunn represented me. Never again. I've taken the trash to the curb.)

Chevron also went after journalists, in one case, filing a complaint against the BBC Television reporter that broke the story that Chevron had destroyed key evidence in the case. I was that reporter—and survived with my job after a year of hearings. But Chevron's prosecution did a damn good job of scaring off other journalists.

Some were scared off; some bought off. PBS News Hour wouldn't touch the death-by-oil story. The official chief sponsor of the PBS News Hour? Chevron.

Here's the story, broadcast by BBC [. https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=W1FIXwtfvBs] and, in the US, by Democracy Now!, the story you won't find on the Petroleum Broadcast System

Palast with oil sludge on stick, Ecuador

I've gone way out of my way to get ChevronTexaco's side of the story. I finally chased them down in Ecuador's capital, Quito. I showed them a study of the epidemic of childhood leukemia centered on where their company dumped oil sludge. Here's their reply:

"And it's the only case of cancer in the world? How many cases of children with cancer do you have in the States?"

Texaco's lawyer, Rodrigo Perez, was chuckling and snorting.

"Scientifically, nobody has proved that crude causes cancer."

OK, then. But what about the epidemiological study about children with cancer in the Amazon traced to hydrocarbons?

The parents of the dead kids, he said, would have some big hurdles in court: "If there is somebody with cancer there, they must prove it is caused by crude or by the petroleum industry. And, second, they have to prove that it is OUR crude."

Perez leaned over with a huge grin.

"Which is absolutely impossible."

He grinned even harder.

Maybe some guy eating monkeys in the jungle can't prove it. And maybe that's because the evidence of oil dumping was destroyed.

Deliberately, by Chevron.

I passed the ChevronTexaco legal duo a document from their files labeled "Personal y confidential." They read in silence. They stayed silent quite a while. Jaime Varela, Chevron's lawyer, was wearing his tan golf pants and white shoes, an open shirt and bespoke blue blazer. He had a blow-dried bouffant hairdo much favored by the ruling elite of Latin America and skin whiter than mine, a color also favored by the elite.

Jaime had been grinning too. He read the memo. He stopped grinning. The key part says,

"Todos los informes previos deben ser sacados de las oficinas principales y las del campo, y ser destruidos."

". . . Reports . . . are to be removed from the division and field offices and be destroyed." It came from the company boss in the States, "R. C. Shields, Presidente de la Junta."

Removed and destroyed. That smells an awful lot like an order to destroy evidence, which in this case means evidence of abandoned pits of deadly drilling residue. Destroying evidence that is part of a court action constitutes fraud.

In the United States, that would be a crime, a jail-time crime. OK, gents, you want to tell me about this document?

"Can we have a copy of this?" Varela asked me, pretending he'd never seen it before in his life. I'll pretend with them, if that gets me information.

"Sure. You've never seen this?"

The ritual of innocence continued as they asked a secretary to make copies. "We're sure there's an explanation," Varela said. I'm sure there is. "We'll get back to you as soon as we find out what it is."

I'm still waiting.

Jaime Varela, Chevron Attorney, Quito, Ecuador
